

HUSBAND GOT ON HER NERVES, SAYS RUNAWAY WIFE

Couldn't Bear to Give Up
Musical Ambition, So Mrs.
Lawrie Left.

DISCOVERED IN PARIS.

First Elopement Turned Out
Badly, She Says—Now
She's Trying It Alone.

Frederick E. Lawrie, former secretary to Charles G. Gates, has learned that his young wife, who disappeared on Feb. 2, is in Paris living in a scrubby little room in the Latin quarter and studying to become a pianist.

Mrs. Lawrie was Miss Marian Gilmore, one of the prettiest girls in Elizabeth, N. J., and the daughter of former Judge Patrick H. Gilmore, who is said to be worth more than a million dollars. Her marriage was somewhat spectacular, as she eloped with Lawrie in November, 1906, and dropped her marriage certificate in a street car the day of the ceremony. The finding of the document by George W. Robinson, a clerk, revealed the secret.

Mrs. Lawrie's love for music, her ambition to become a great concert performer and the fact that her husband "got on her nerves" as she expresses it, formed a combination that inspired her to run away.

The Lawries do not appear to have been greatly excited by the young woman's disappearance. "We don't care where she is," her father-in-law says. "We are not interested in her."

In Paris young Mrs. Lawrie has been known among the Bohemians of the quarter as Natalie Ingraham. She has gone in for the study of the art of the character in the way of the actress, and she is said to be a very good part of the space in her small room is an upright piano, and she has a large, grand piano.

She eloped with Lawrie at a time when her father-in-law was planning to marry a man of wealth in Philadelphia, and now she says her marriage was a mistake.

"My first elopement turned out so badly," she said, "that I decided this time to try it alone, and I am satisfied with the result. I got on my nerves, and anyway I wanted to live entirely for my art. My father-in-law has much more soul for art than even my father, who objected to my playing in public. I tried and I was living in an apartment in West Eleventh street, and when he went on a business trip to Spokane, I went on a visit to Elizabeth. On Feb. 2 I got a telegram from Fred saying he would be back the next day. That decided me. I had been studying and playing all the time he was away, and I decided to bear to have it stopped. So I went down to papa's office and kissed him good-bye, and he said, 'Of course, that I was going, and engaged passage. Then I packed my trunks and left the next day, and I was at the pier at Hoboken just an hour before the Kaiser Wilhelm sailed.'

The young woman is very nearly at the end of her financial resources in Paris, but she says she intends to continue studying and show that she is the truly artistic artist. She is popular with the way set in Paris and has been offered positions as a soloist at the Casino de Montmartre and the Apollo Music Hall.

Dr. Van Eeden Tells How to Bring Up Children In Way They Should Go by the Aid of Telepathy

Dutch Sociologist Declares His Plan a
Big Improvement on the Old
Fashioned Slipper to Correct
Delinquencies.

NO DANGER OF CROSSED WIRES

Bedtime the Most Favorable Opportunity for the Mother or Father to Experiment in Thought Transference.

By Rose C. Tiltson.

Rose C. Tiltson.

The Big Stick in the home is doomed, for telepathy is the latest remedy for the faults of precocious youngsters. If you want to spare the pants as well as improve the child, just feed him on mental suggestions.

For, according to Dr. Frederick Van Eeden, eminent physician and sociologist of Holland, hypno-suggestion is a sure cure for juvenile evils and ills.

"Parents can mould their children to be good or bad by suggestion," said the bearded wise man from the land of dikes and ditches to-day, in disclosing the secrets of how to raise a family on mental telegraphy.

"The childish mind is impressionable, and a mother or father by verbal and mental suggestions forms either a worthy or wicked character for the child. If a little one is continually told that he is naughty, bad, incorrigible, he will grow to consider himself beyond redemption, and will make no effort to cultivate goodness. It is not the child's fault if he is naughty—it is the fault of his parents."

"Then a mother shouldn't blame her juvenile joys if she finds them beset with jam, for she's the one who is really to blame for not having her mental wires working?" I inquired of Dr. Van Eeden.

"Yes, stealing jam and other offenses can be stopped by thought transmission," the doctor answered.

"A mother by thinking good of her children, by crediting them with the best motives, and by showing her implicit trust in them, will develop in her children the best qualities, for no child who is surrounded by an atmosphere of love and trust will be anything but good. I do not, however, believe that anyone is without sin, even the best have a small amount of wickedness, but parents can rear good or bad children according to their own suggestions."

"Every home should be conducted along the lines of mental suggestion. It is only then that harmony can exist throughout the household."

Dr. Van Eeden evidently believes in turning the family fireside into a mental telegraphic exchange where thought is transmitted at stated intervals along approved lines. But if the wires crossed or the mental wires tappers happened to disagree, I wondered if there would be as much harmony as in a Harlem flat.

"Have you tried mental suggestion on children?" I asked the sociologist from Holland, "or do you merely hold it as a theory?"

Dr. Van Eeden's deep set blue eyes twinkled merrily and his whole good-natured face broke into an expansive smile.

"I have watched the effect of mental suggestion on children for more than twenty years," he acknowledged.

"For I have brought up my family in that manner. I know its value, and the mother who is wise will take my advice and employ mental suggestion in bringing up her family."

Might Train Parents.

"But the American mother isn't an adept at the art of sending mental messages. I am afraid she would need a special course in telepathy before she could transmit thoughts to her children."

"A school for parents might be organized," he suggested. Dr. Van Eeden, "where mothers and fathers could be taught proper methods for governing their children. Seriously speaking, a much finer race of men could be reared if parents only realized how greatly the child is influenced by thought. It is by suggesting good that good is produced, by mentally determining that the child shall be all that is fine, that he ultimately develops a superior character. It is the same in regard to health. Parents constantly endanger the health of their little ones by asking whether they feel sick, and by suggesting that they are sick. The mind is this question suggests illness to the children's minds which in time actually causes illness."

Bed Time Best Opportunity.

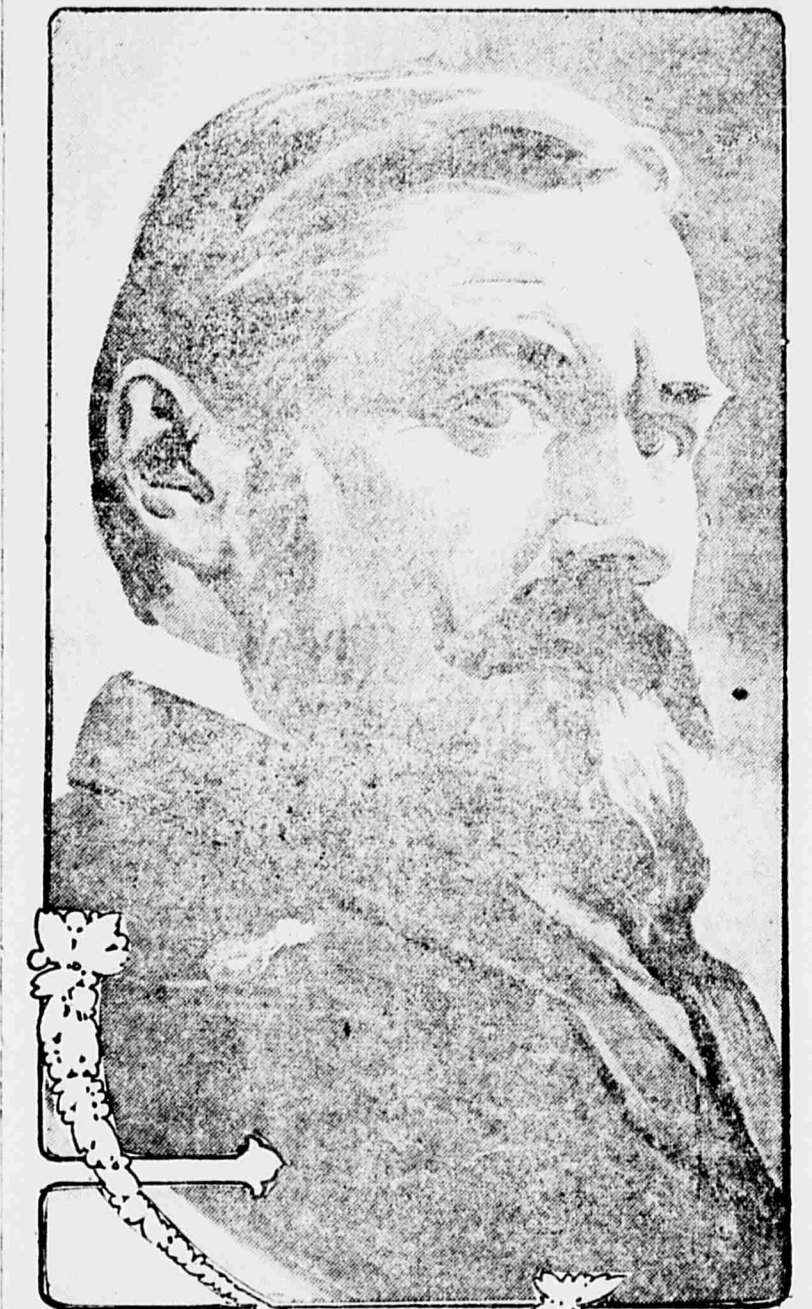

"When the child is drowsy just before retiring is the best time for the mother or father to transmit thought. Its mind is more receptive and it responds more easily to ideas."

"Is the same true of adults, and are they open to mental suggestion?" "Assuredly yes," Dr. Van Eeden quickly said, "though not to such a large degree. Until one is twenty the mind is very impressionable and it is during those years that parents should use mental suggestion. After that the character is formed for good or bad, and it is hard to change it. A man's early training makes or mars him. And it is for this reason that parents cannot be too careful in influencing their children by mental suggestion."

PINNED UNDER FALLEN TREE

With Both Legs Broken Man Is Held Prisoner All Night.

In the woods near Millville, N. J., on Wednesday Stacy Mason was pinned down by a tree which had fallen over him. He was unable to move and was held prisoner all night. He was crawling home when men found and added him. Both legs were broken. It is doubtful if he can recover.

DR. FRED VAN EEDEN.

WOMAN DRAGGED INTO HALLWAY BY THREE MEN

Screams of Miss Murphy Brought Help and Two Assaults Were Caught.

Miss Kate Murphy, a comely young manicurist, of No. 455 West Thirty-seventh street, appeared in the West Side Court to-day, and charged two badly battered prisoners with attempting to drag her into a hallway on Tenth avenue, near Thirty-seventh street, while she was on her way home last night.

She was rescued by Fred C. E. Walker, a fireman, of No. 49 West Thirty-seventh street, who dragged the girl from three men who had attacked her, notwithstanding that they kicked and beat him and threatened him with revolvers.

Walker and the girl shouted for help and policeman Lynch, of the West Thirty-seventh street station, rushed around the corner. When he saw the thugs with their guns out he drew his revolver and shot over their heads. This drove them into flight and Lynch pursued, driving as he ran. The bullets whistled over the heads of two of the ruffians and perched on the third, though the third man ran on and escaped. On the way to the station house Lynch's captives showed fight, but his night stick took it out of them.

The prisoners said they were Joseph Walker, of No. 22 West Thirty-fourth street, and Charles Mack, of No. 53 West Thirty-fifth street. They were held in $500 bail each for trial on a charge of attempted assault and carrying concealed weapons.

Magistrate Warrick congratulated Freeman Walker on his plan and policeman Lynch on his good work in capturing two of the three thugs.

ANGRY GREEKS BEAT POOR DRAMATIST

Performance He Sold Tickets
For Didn't Take Place for Lack of Actors.

The trouble started when a Turk tried to produce a Greek play. It was advertised for the Little Hall, Sixth avenue and Forty-second street, last night, by Nicholas Koutagos, the impresario and author of the drama. Three hundred Greeks—peasant sellers, bankers and merchants—gathered at the doors.

Inside, the playwright was waiting for the appearance of his company, which, he had been told, would be of such class that no rehearsal would be necessary. So long as the promoter's voice was heard, the company arrived. It consisted of six fair maidens. But to the horror of Koutagos they could not speak a word of Greek. They spoke only Yiddish. How could he permit his drama to be murdered in Yiddish?

The doors remained locked while the Turk and the Yiddish maidens argued in sign language. The three hundred clamored for admission. Detectives finally arrested Koutagos for obtaining money under false pretenses.

As they were taking him out of the hall the crowd fell on him and pummeled him. The police rescued him and got him as far as Broadway, where the Greeks pummeled him again. At Thirty-sixth street, the 30 fell on him once more. Then reserves arrived from the Tenderloin Station and poor Koutagos, in what was left of his clothes, was taken to the hospital.

He is twenty-three years old and wears pastry in a tall, round hat at No. 691 Sixth avenue.

The loss is estimated at $100,000. The company is located in a large residential section known as the Highlands, and one house was burned and two others badly damaged.

HURLS HERSELF TO DEATH FROM HIGH WINDOW

Mrs. Sarah Sherry Ends Her Life Before a Crowd in the Street.

FELL HEAD DOWNWARD.

Suicide Caused So Much Excitement That the Police
Reserves Were Called.

Along the pavement stretching before and beyond No. 61 East One Hundred and Third street a throng of women with babies in carriages or with infants in their arms were horrified a little after 9 o'clock today to see a woman hurl herself from a fifth story window and descend head downward to the sidewalk.

The woman was Mrs. Sarah Sherry, forty-five years old, a widow, who lived in the fifth-story flat of No. 61 with her son, Samuel, and a boarder—David Keppel. She had become despondent over the waning resources of the family and her son's inability to obtain employment.

After she had cleared away the breakfast things Mrs. Sherry suddenly appeared in the front room before the boarder and opened a window. As Keppel had down his paper she said: "I'm tired of living and will kill myself now."

Before the man could lift his hand she sprang from the window.

The woman struck on her head and was instantly killed. Several women who saw her fall to the pavement fainted and the shrieks of other women and the screams of children soon brought a great crowd to the neighborhood. Reserves were sent around from the East One Hundred and Fourth street station and the body was removed there.

HAWSER CUT OFF FINGERS.

Tug's Mate Lost Part of Hand
When Line Tautened Up.

In following his calling as mate on a tugboat, Charles Alberts, of No. 36 Sixteenth street, Brooklyn, will be handicapped in the future by the absence of four fingers from his right hand. He lost them to-day at Stephenson's Dock, Astoria.

Alberts, on a New York Central tug, was directing the job of placing a barge alongside the pier. He happened to slip his hand between a snubbing post and a hawser just as the slack in the line was taken up. All four fingers were severed off by a knife.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Fire early today destroyed the lumber yard of Elmsinger Bros. in the northern part of the city, and fanned by a stiff breeze, spread to adjoining dwellings and buildings of the old Freedmen's Hospital. Damage was done to the extent of $200,000. The buildings of the American League Baseball Park were for a time in danger, but were not damaged.

Two firemen were injured. Chief Anthony J. Nicosi and both legs broken, and John S. Trodden, driver of an engine, had his right arm broken.

WHOLLY CURED IN 8 MONTHS BY CUTICURA

"I had an itching, tormenting eczema ever since I came into the world, and I am now a man fifty-five years old. I tried all kinds of medicines I heard of, but found no relief. I was truly in a frightful condition. At last my blood was so bad that I broke out all over with red and white boils, which kept growing until they were as big as walnuts, causing great pain and misery. I thought they would take the skin off my whole body, but I kept from scratching as well as I could. I was so run down that I could hardly do my work. Mr. Nelson R. Burnett recommended the use of Cuticura Remedies, telling me he was confident they would benefit and, in time, cure me. I used the Cuticura Soap, Ointment, Resolvent, and Pills for about eight months, and I can truthfully say I am cured. BOY RUNS AWAY TO HIDE FAILURE IN SCHOOL.

Fourteen-Year-Old Pupil Ashamed
To Tell Mother of His Disgrace Disappears.

Rather than face his mother after failing his failure to win promotion in a public school, Eddie Ekman, fourteen years old, of No. 487 Eighteenth street, Brooklyn, ran away from home last Monday morning, and today the police of the Greater City are instructed to keep an eye out for him.

It appears that Eddie was promoted to a higher grade at the school on Fourth avenue, near Sixteenth street, early last fall, but failed to pass the midwinter examinations. The news found its way into the Ekman home, but not from Eddie's lips. He was ashamed to tell, according to boy friends. He was recently set back to a lower grade.

Eddie carried a $5 gold coin with him. His father is connected with a dock-building concern, and says he will gladly go a thousand miles to recover his young son. The mother is prostrated over the lad's disappearance.

BOY PICKS UP ODD WEAPON.

Hands Hit to School Principal, Who Accidentally Discharges It.

A pupil in the Jersey City High School landed yesterday to Principal Hopkins a peculiarly arranged contrivance, which he had found in one of the corridors. It was the size of a revolver and had the appearance of being one, though it was inserted in a sort of tube, with a rubber bulb at its head.

Principal Hopkins was examining the weapon when it was summoned to the telephone. He carried it along with him and while talking he pressed the rubber bulb, an explosion followed, and a bullet embedded itself in a desk. The pupils were greatly frightened and it was believed that the boy who had found the contrivance was killed. The contrivance looks as if it was intended to insert in an umbrella or cane handle.
